METHOD AND APPARATUS FOR CLIENT- IN-CHARGE BUSINESS TRANSACTION PROCESSING

ABSTRACT

The method and apparatus of the client-in-charge architecture is based upon a different approach to the problems of server bandwidth and latency, found in the server-heavy architectures, while addressing the problems of requiring client acceptance, found in the client-heavy architectures.

5